I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The Honourable Jody Wilson-Raybould, Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada, introduced the National Report of Canada to the Working Group of the universal periodic review.
6. It was recalled that in accordance with the federal structure of Canada, and as enshrined in the Constitution, responsibility for implementing Canada's international human rights obligations is shared among federal, provincial and territorial governments.
7. The delegation indicated that the strong commitment of governments in Canada to human rights had been reaffirmed during a meeting of federal, provincial and territorial ministers responsible for human rights in December 2017. Ministers made a number of commitments to strengthen intergovernmental collaboration and public dialogue on human rights and discussed key priorities in relation to Canada's international human rights obligations. These and other commitments were affirmed during the UPR review process.
8. Canada's Indigenous population -- First Nations, Inuit and Métis peoples -- face a number of challenges including greater rates of poverty and food insecurity, a higher likelihood of experiencing poor housing conditions, lower education outcomes, and greater health disparities. Canada has committed to achieving true, meaningful and lasting reconciliation based on the recognition and implementation of Indigenous rights.
9. In February 2018, the Prime Minister announced that the Government of Canada will develop – in full partnership with First Nations, Inuit, and Métis Peoples – a Recognition and Implementation of Rights Framework as the basis for all relations between Indigenous Peoples and the federal government. This builds on Canada's ongoing reconciliation efforts, including its unqualified endorsement of the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples.

10. The Truth and Reconciliation Commission released its final report in December 2015, which includes 94 Calls to Action. The Government signalled that it will fully implement the Calls to Action in partnership with Indigenous communities, the provinces, territories, and other partners.

11. Indigenous women and girls in Canada are disproportionately affected by all forms of violence. Canada is committed to ensuring the safety and security of all women and children in Canada. During the second UPR cycle, many delegations recommended that Canada launch an inquiry into missing and murdered Indigenous women and girls. The National Inquiry was launched in December 2015 and is an important step to end this ongoing national tragedy. Furthermore, the Government of Canada's broad review of the criminal justice system is looking, among other things, at ways to address the overrepresentation of Indigenous women and girls as victims of crime.

12. The Government renewed its commitment to gender equality, including by appointing the first federal minister fully-dedicated to gender issues, and the first gender balanced federal Cabinet. With regard to the gender wage gap, the Government recognized that pay equity was a human right and provided examples of action taken in this regard, including at the provincial level.

13. Gender-based violence remains a significant barrier to achieving gender equality. In order to address this issue, in 2017 the Government announced the first federal strategy to end gender-based violence, which included investments in important programs for at-risk populations, including Indigenous women and girls. The Government also introduced numerous criminal law reforms to better protect women and all Canadians from violence, including strengthened sexual assault laws and responses to intimate partner violence.

14. A key priority was increasing the inclusion of persons with disabilities in society and, following extensive consultations, the Government expects to introduce legislation in 2018 to transform how accessibility is addressed at the federal level.

15. In the context of migration, Canada's inclusive policies support diversity and a two-way approach to integration. The Government works closely with provincial, territorial, municipal, and community-based partners, to ensure the successful integration of newcomers, including refugees. Additionally, Canada strives to address vulnerabilities faced by some immigrant sub-groups such as women who are victims of gender-based violence.

16. Canada recognizes the importance of addressing racial and religious discrimination and crimes motivated by hate and the challenges that remain in these areas.

17. The delegation noted that the visit of the Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent in 2017 highlighted many issues of discrimination against African Canadians and indicated that the Government is making significant new investments towards a new national anti-racism approach, including measures to address the challenges faced by Black Canadians. The delegation referred to a number of examples of such action taken at the provincial level including by Ontario and Quebec.

18. Canada is also proud of its agenda to promote equality for LGBTIQI people, protect their rights, and address violence and discrimination against them – both historical and current. The delegation referred to a number of measures that had been recently adopted in this regard.

19. The delegation noted that while Canada is a prosperous country, too many Canadians do not share in that prosperity and that therefore a Canadian Poverty Reduction Strategy is being developed. Additionally, several provinces, territories and municipalities also had stand-alone poverty reduction strategies.

20. Canada recently unveiled its first National Housing Strategy, an ambitious plan to help ensure that Canadians have access to affordable housing that meets their needs. Canada is also funding the creation of three distinctions-based (culturally specific) housing strategies for First Nations, Inuit, and Métis communities.

21. As part of the federal Government's commitment to creating a better, fairer immigration detention system, in 2016, Canada launched a new framework for immigration detention. This framework includes new funding to improve detention infrastructure and provide better medical and mental health.

22. Following National Security Consultations held in 2016, the Government of Canada has put forward new legislation that proposes to establish a National Security and Intelligence Review Agency and an Intelligence Commissioner. Taken together with other recent changes the legislation would create a robust accountability framework for Canada's national security and intelligence activities.

145.2 To improve the promotion and public awareness of international human rights in Canada;

145.3 To initiate a transparent process for ongoing consideration by federal, provincial and territorial governments of adherence to human rights treaties that Canada is not yet a party to;

145.4 To continue to take legislative and other steps to progressively realize the right to adequate housing as part of an adequate standard of living for its citizens;

145.5 To end, by March 2021, all long-term drinking water advisories affecting public systems on reserve; and;

145.6 To co-developing distinctions-based Indigenous housing strategies with First Nations, Inuit and Métis partners to ensure that future housing reform is reflective of their specific needs;

145.7 The Government of Canada also commits to continuing to improve services delivered to Indigenous Peoples – such as education, clean water, housing, and health services. We aim to achieve this through: the full implementation of Jordan's Principle to ensure that First Nations children receive the same health and social services and supports, as other Canadian children; the full implementation of all the orders of the Canadian Human Rights Tribunal; and, the co-development and transformation of the delivery of Indigenous child welfare.
